

Prohibiting XM's capability to present its "Instant Traffic and Weather" reports seems not only unconstitutional, but pointless. Why deprive listeners of the ability to know the weather and the traffic that is around them? It seems to me that the only reason one would have is to stifle the growing popularity of satellite radio. And the only industry that would have any interest in doing that would be the traditional radio broadcasting companies. I believe that line of thinking ends with a very logical explanation. Do not allow this piece of legislation to be passed.
